"The bicycle has a soul. If you succeed to love it, it will give you emotions that you will never forget." —Mario Cipollini

Paul Jensen The President's Corner

This time next week will see me wearing long sleeve shirts, long pants along with frosty breath for I will be 100 miles north of London with living quarters in a manor house fit for king.

Harlaxton Manor is actually located north of the most northern point in the U.S.

As for cycling, there are ten hybrid bikes of various sized available for all to use but the condition of them is usually sketchy. Having been there before has given me the chance to scope out a few 20-25 mile routes so I am somewhat set in that regard. There will be no just throwing on a pair of biking shorts and jersey to go riding, more like sweats and rain gear. There is not a bike club near the manor with the closest one about 35 miles away and no easy way to get there.

THE GPM IS COMING!—

and that means we need YOU! The first Sunday in October (the second this year) should find you at the 4H center being of assistance to pull off the biggest and best pumpkin ever. Please contact Darlene Wefel or any of the officers to volunteer, it is fun and it will give you that feel good feeling when you are done. As you might have noticed, some ride times have already changed and will continue to do so; please refer to the ride schedule for these upcoming changes.

It has been a darn hot summer with little or no wind so, but as I have maintained throughout, you will not hear me complain. It has been wonderful and I have made some new riding buddies and maintained many of my old friends.

In the next two or three years the tri-state will be observing many changes when it comes to cycling. Evansville is becoming (slowly but surely) more bicycle friendly and there will be programs, federal, state and local, that will also be evident. More to come!

Have to get back to packing and try to think of stuff I can't live without for four months.

Cheers,
Parthur

Editors Note: Paul Jensen was a Senior and I was a Freshman at the University of Evansville when the college purchased Harlaxton Manor to allow for UE students an opportunity to study abroad. Good Luck, Paul. Have a Pint on me.

CARSON'S BIG ADVENTURE

EBC Youth Cyclist Carson Brindle pondered, "How can I get Mom and Dad to let me spend more time with Grandma? I know ... I'll just ship them off to Europe for a couple of weeks for the Tour De France!" This is their story ...

Tour de France

After years of dreaming about a trip to Europe and months of planning...we boarded a plane bound for Paris on July 22nd. We arrived in Paris for part one of our trip—based mainly around the final stage of the Tour de France. We booked a package with Discover France (www.cyclingclassics.com) that included our hotel stay plus Tour viewing passes on the Champs Elysees. The hotel was near the Louvre Museum and was really lovely. Rooms are small by US standards, but clean and comfortable.

Sunday, July 24th was a gorgeous day for the finale of the Tour. We picked up our entry passes for the viewing area mid-morning then spent a couple of hours walking down the Champs Elysees, taking in the excitement of the day. The viewing passes we purchased allowed us entry into a tented area near the Place de la Concorde. Included was our drinks, plenty of food, reserved bleacher seating or the option to view from the reception area where the food was—which is where we stayed. While in line to enter the tent, we began chatting with the other people in line with us and met a nice couple from Australia. They were enjoying their first year of retirement by biking their way around France, staying in rental homes called gites (www.gite.com) and hopping from city to city by bike.

They ended up sitting at our table inches from road which soon the peloton would be barreling down. We had a great day celebrating the pre race tour festivities with our new Aussie friends. It turns out our tent was filled with Aussies, who were all in rare form since one of their own, Cadel Evans, was sporting the Maillot Jaune! They adopted us into their circle for the day and we had a blast with our rowdy fellow cycling enthusiasts. It is possible to view the TDF along the Champs Elysees without purchasing the viewing passes, but if you are thinking about doing a similar trip—we highly recommend the viewing pass option. The areas along the Champs Elysees that are not reserved have less than desirable viewing and get VERY crowded. We had fence line seating with a clear view from 400 meters to the finish line. An open bar, ever-changing food options, positioned on the finishing stretch, along with free, clean bathrooms made this a surreal experience. But most impressive was our view and access to the riders. We had no one standing in front of us. Our pictures of the cyclists look like postcards. We had one of the big screens right in front of us so we could see the riders prior to their arrival in Paris. And when the stage was over, we had the ability to get riders' autographs. We fully believe those passes were money well spent! Below is but a few of hundreds of front row pictures we got.

While in Paris we did two different bike tours offered by the same company, Fat Tire Bike Tours (www.fattirebiketours.com). They have several locations across Europe, but it all started with one guy from Texas,

Mike, who started giving guided bike tours of Paris starting from the south pillar of the Eiffel tower. All tour guides are from the States or Great Britain, so you can take in a great English speaking history lesson of the city while visiting all the famous landmarks. Paris by bike is by far the easiest way to get around and to have a guided tour makes the experience fun, relaxing, and enjoyable. Everyone rides California cruiser bikes, which I have to say takes a little to get used to, but for the casual riding you do is perfect for this tour. You can make reservations online, but truthfully even on the busiest days this company is setup to handle as many people that show up. Even on the Monday after the Tour, they had 80 to 100 hundred people at the South Tower and it was no problem to join a group. They walk you back to their shop and break you up into small groups. I think they have over 300 bikes on site—you select one, adjust your seat and off you go! We took both the day and night tour on separate days. The day tour stops a lot and covers a great deal of the history, people, and culture of Paris. It's great for your first day in Paris if you don't know what you really want to spend time doing later. The night tour is completely different; it takes you by some of the same sites as the day trip, but also different places. The night tour is longer in distance and less on stopping and talking, but includes a river cruise with complementary wine which the tour guide hauls around on some saddle bags for the first leg. You can go on the cruise outside of the tour group, but the guides know the ins and outs of the boat.

Although there were hundreds of people getting on the boat in front of us our guide maneuvered us quickly through and we got some of the best seats for viewing--add the wine and friends from other English speaking countries like Australia and Great Britain and it was a wonderful experience.

Prague

We left Paris by plane for Prague, Czech Republic. This has to be one of the most beautiful cities in all of Europe. It is also one of the very few that were spared the bombings of WWII so the buildings still remain from centuries ago and the city spends a fortune to keep them maintained. We went to visit some friends and to do some sightseeing. We really didn't have an agenda before we arrived in Prague. When we checked in the hotel, they gave us many brochures of what to do, one being, you guessed it, a bike tour of Prague. This one was run by a different company (City Bike Tours), but we found it equally as nice. Rather than the cruisers we rode in Paris, in Prague we road full suspension Trek mountain bikes. And for good reason-- to maintain the old town feel, the streets are almost all cobblestone. These are eat- your- skinny- tire roads! In addition there are several times you end up curb hopping as you tour through town. This tour is still pretty laid back and easy riding, but you definitely make full use of the suspension in the bike. If you ever make it to Europe, put this city on your list to see. It's amazing.

Street scene in Prague's Old Town Square.

French Alps—This is an entire story in itself. We'll write up this for next month! It was EPIC!!!!

FROM THE EDITOR:

My apologies for the lateness of the September Newsletter. Our world was tuned upside down on August 18th when my grandson Sam Bellett was hit by a car while riding his bike to High School Cross Country Practice. I want to thank you all from the bottom of my heart for all your prayers, thoughts and well-wishes. Sam is on the mend. And time is on his side as he recuperates. He is scheduled for a Rehab Center here in Jacksonville next week where they can begin the mending process for his brain injury. Thank you all. Paul Sluder

Hill Bill and Pill Bill in the Hills Hills!

The Bills (and the Helens and the Kathys) rolled into Chattanooga around 5:00 Friday, May 6th for the 2011 3 State 3 Mountain Challenge. After checking in and picking up our packets at an excellent facility, Finley Stadium on the campus of University of Tennessee Chattanooga, we went out for a relaxing meal at a Chinese restaurant and evening together. Who knew that in China they use Cormorant birds to catch fish in the Yangtze River? Well, Hill, Helen and Kathy knew. Pill thought they were crazy, but they were right. They tie a cord loosely around the birds neck so it can still breath, but not swallow fish. The birds dive underwater and catch fish, but cannot swallow them because of the cord around their necks. So they surface and the fisherman just take the fish from their mouths! Really!

After a good night's sleep we arrived back at Finley Stadium eager to get started on what would be a fun day in the saddle. We were told that there would be a route change due to the number of tornadoes that had decimated the Chattanooga area. We would still get to climb Suck Creek Mountain and Sand Mountain but were routed around Lookout Mountain. The road up Lookout Mountain was passable, but they didn't want thousands of bikes going past people who were still trying to rebuild their lives. We totally agreed with the organizers on this. Something like this puts out lives into perspective. The mountains increase in gradient, with Suck Creek Mountain being the first. It starts about 12 miles into the ride and goes 6 miles at 5% grade. The pavement was smooth, and being wooded all the way, the shade felt good.

Coasting down the backside that early in the day, however, was a little chilly. We were glad to finally pop out into the sun, having been hanging around 30mph for 3-4 miles. The areas between the major mountains was all rolling to hilly, with precious few miles of actual flat terrain. After circling Nickajack Lake, it was time for Sand Mountain. Sand Mountain is shorter at about 3 miles, but steeper at 8-10% grade. It was 2nd gear for Pill, probably 3rd for Hill. The top of Sand Mountain was altogether different than Suck Creek. On the top of Sand Mountain you stay on a ridge for almost 20 miles, with beautiful open views of the valleys below. When it comes time to descend into the Chattanooga area, the road was very steep in places. I know of three times that I hit 40mph on this descent. In a normal year, this would have taken us to the base of Lookout Mountain. Since we were skipping Lookout Mountain this time, they routed us around Lookout Mountain over several "stingers" that were very steep, but short. The route took us right along the base of Lookout Mountain and on into Chattanooga.

We had a fun day in the saddle. It was challenging in places, beautiful in most places. The devastation from the storms was sobering, and we wish the people of the 3 state area all the best.
